RESIDENTIAL CONVERSION // DORSET, UK

THE BRIEF // Update of farmhouse buildings to accommodate a family of four plus friends in a rural setting near the Jurassic Coast. The client is drawn to a modern, sparse aesthetic with soft, organic touches and references to the local landscape.

DESIGN INTENTION // I wanted to maximise the variety of spaces available to the family, allowing them to enjoy moments together as well as their own creative and lifestyle hobbies.

I introduced three new spaces to the property, including a light-filled conservatory off the main lounge space, a breakout creative space by the kitchen and an enclosed terrace connecting the master suite, with a study for writing.

DESIGN STATEMENT // The Piggery will become a place to gather, reconnect and feel regulated. A collective sanctuary from everyday life, filled with energy and fun.

Pared back yet never cold or clinical, the space blends invitingly tactile textures, muted natural hues and clean, contemporary lines to create a cocooning and restorative ambiance. A counterbalance to their London home's more masculine aesthetic and faster tempo.

PROJECT 01

Walking through the property, sense the grounding embrace of nature, subtly incorporating Dorset's landscapes and seascapes throughout.

Undulating rock formations of Lulworth Cove. Ethereal sunsets over heather-strewn moorlands. Meandering riverside walks beside ancient woodlands.

Treasures from these shared moments are displayed in evolving ways, whether foraged or recreated through personal artistic expressions.

A space in which to grow both collectively and as individuals, The Piggery is reimagined for enjoyment, self expression and restoration.

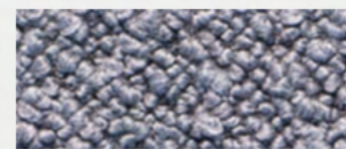

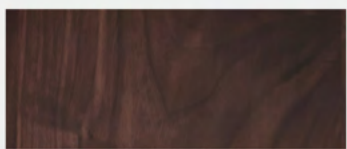

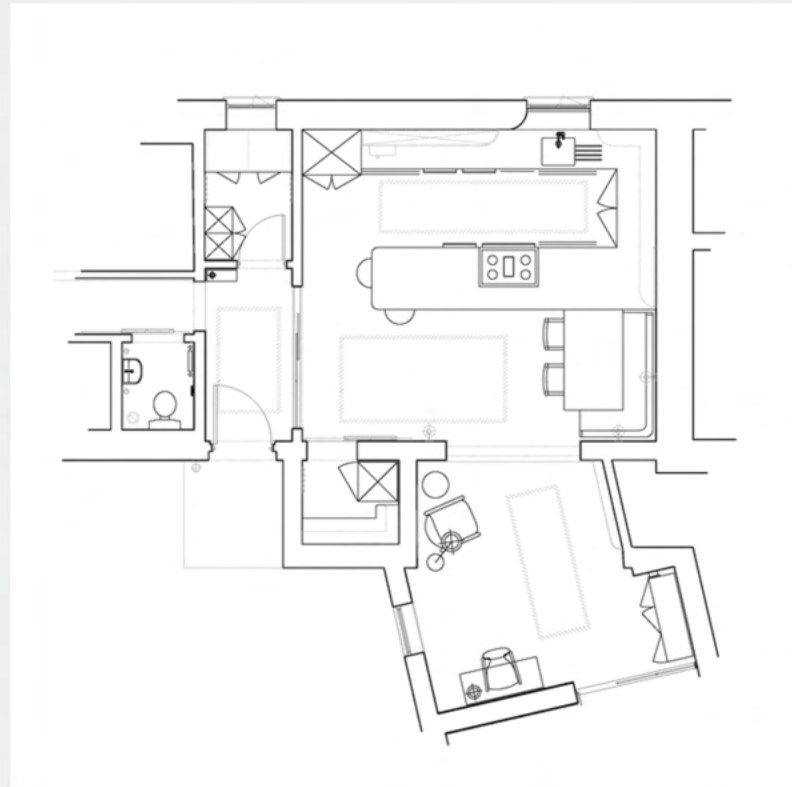

*A space to gather,
a place to grow*

kitchen

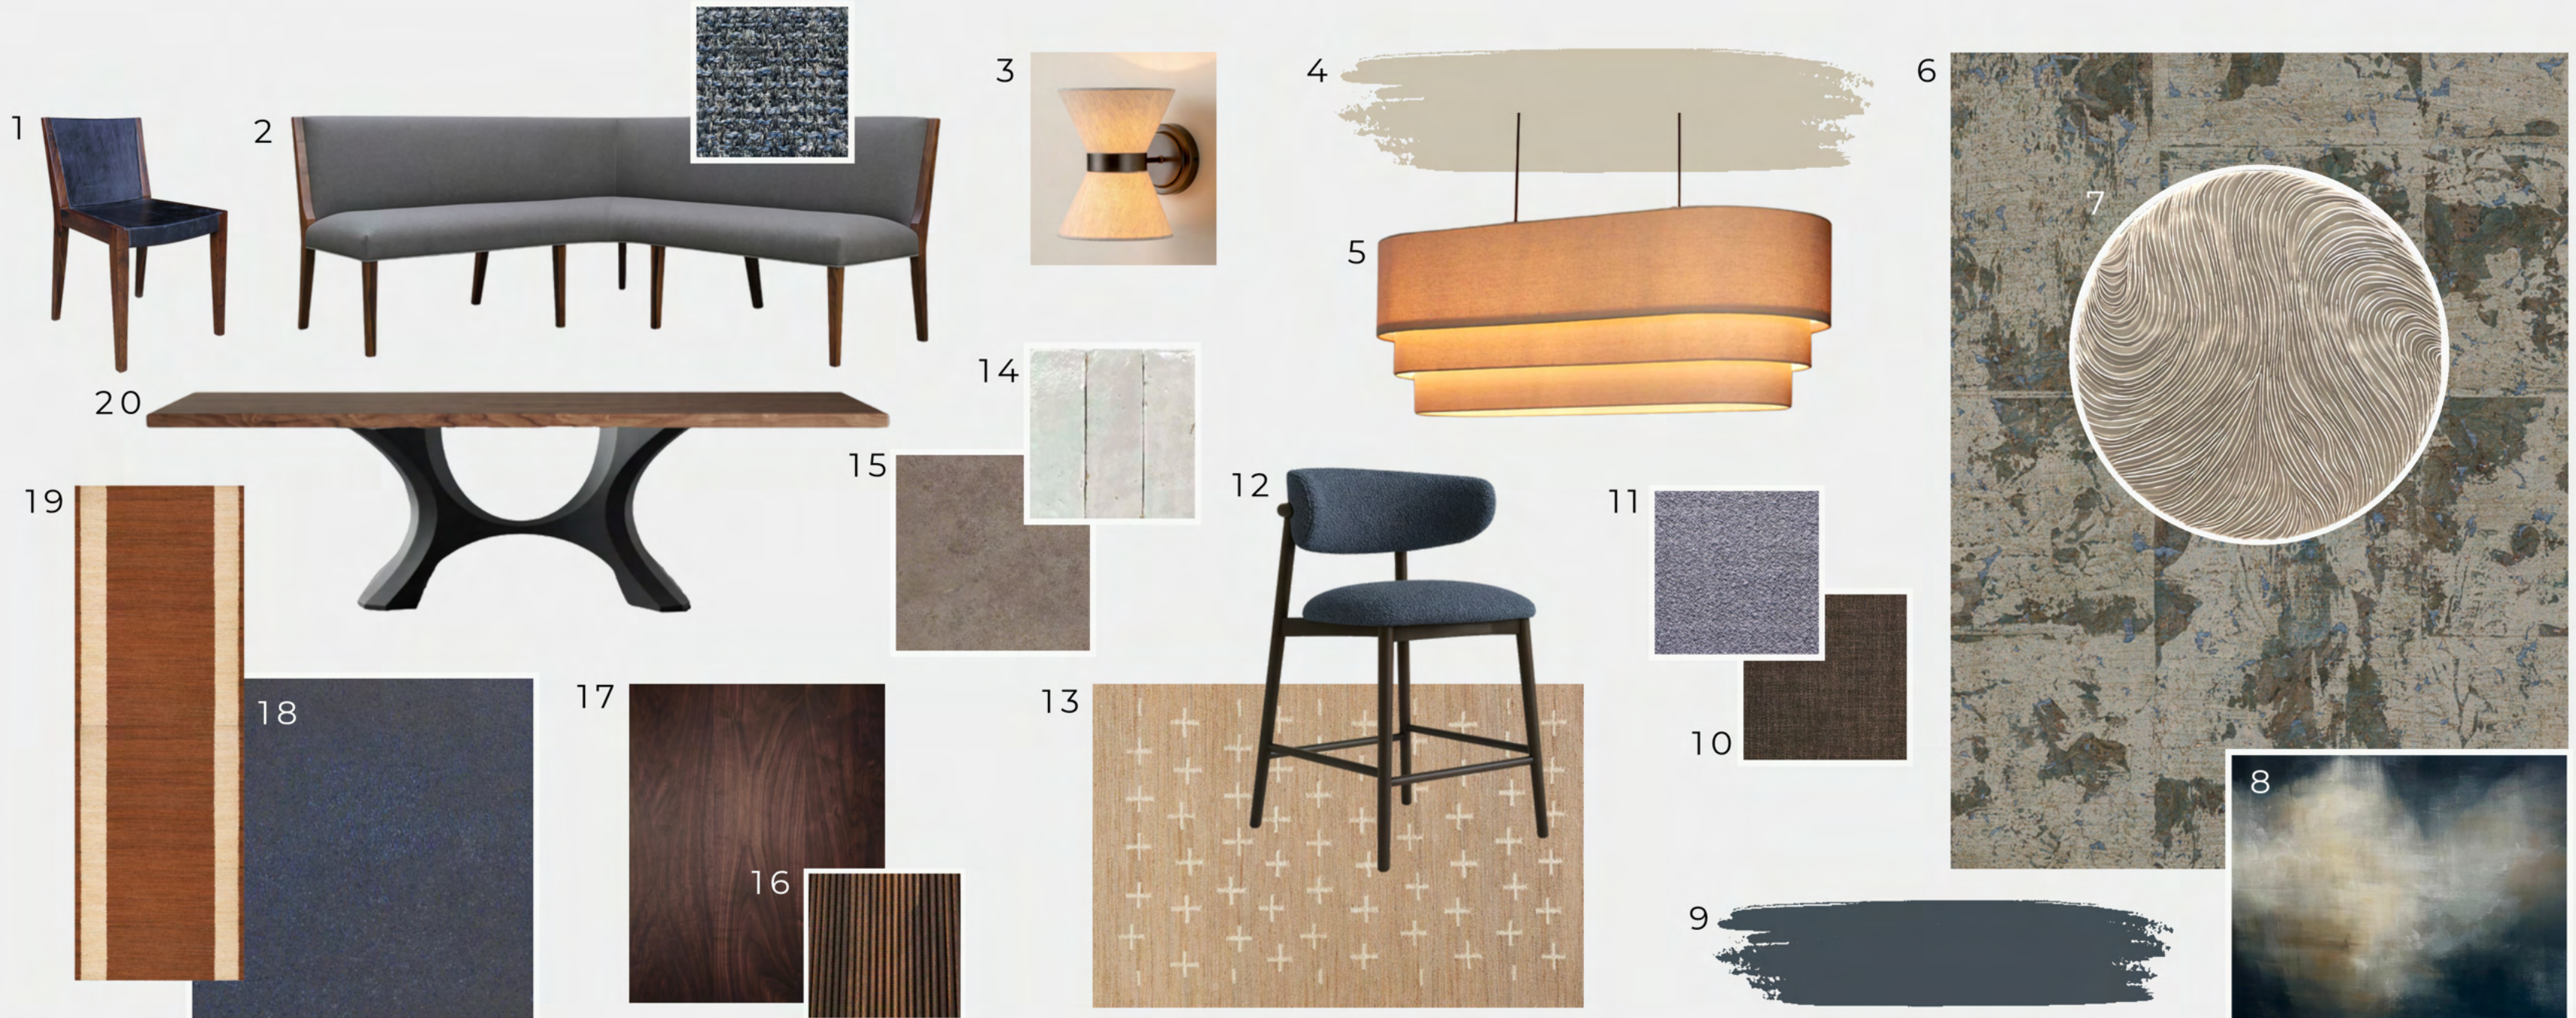

I wanted this space to feel elevated yet relaxed enough to enjoy as a family. The textures and colors are well balanced and calming, but not boring. A cork wall with metallic flecks feels organic and warm, while clean lines, curved lighting and reeded glass reflect the client's preferred architectural style. A sculptural clay artwork nods to the striated rock of Lulworth Cove.

This is an inviting space that turns the eaves into a feature. Wood-effect mauve wall coverings are grounding and a real showstopper, topped by a natural clay and lime plaster in a soft green. Sculptural wall lamps and LED lighting highlight the finishes, with soft grey-brown bamboo blinds and teal accents to mimic an oxidized copper. There's the large, inviting sofa, plenty of storage and shelves for the client's growing collection of treasures.

PROJECT 01

The conservatory walls are in local Portland Stone, with visible fossils, and the glass ceiling is broken up by wooden louvres. Trailing Boston ferns invite nature into the space, and there are two distinct zones: one for dining at this spectacular microskin dining table with a suspended bench seat for space efficiency; while on the other side is a seating area in which to chat with friends while overlooking the garden.

GUEST SUITE // BARNES, UK

goes to LA’*

THE BRIEF // Create a basement guest suite for a townhouse in the leafy Barnes Pond area of South-West London. The owners live internationally, splitting time between London and LA, and have jobs in creative industries. Their adult children and elderly mother will use the suite.

DESIGN STATEMENT // A sanctuary for guests, family and occasionally themselves, Nicola and Adam's guest suite is a calming space where one can retreat from the demands of everyday life.

Dappled warm light, textured and reflective metallics, tactile Italian fabrics like linen and silk, and rich polished wood create a sanctuary of calm.

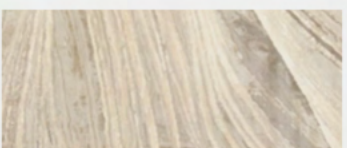

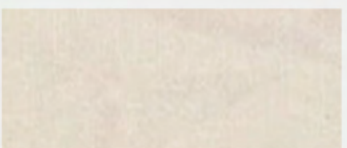

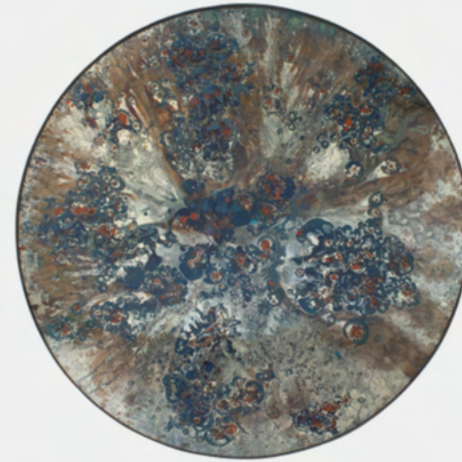

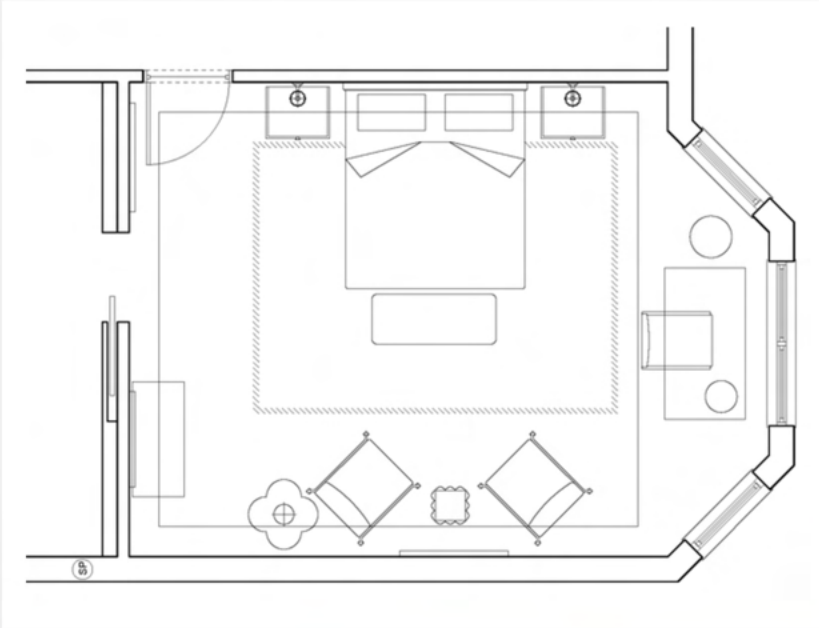

An array of cream, brown and grey tones are offset by rich blues and subtly lustrous finishes to create a restrained, refined and layered space that continues to surprise and delight over time. With a west-facing aspect, the room's warm, earthy tones will be especially brought out by the afternoon and evening light.

Organically influenced shapes are clean yet never cold, textures are cocooning and luxurious, and a mindful use of light provides a therapeutic element.

And as a nod to their LA lifestyle and fondness for Petersham Nurseries' more holistic offerings, the suite brings a spiritual element to its décor, through abstract art and a sunburst rug nestled beneath the desk, where guests can work remotely.
